GUEST CASK ALES & CRAFT KEG BEERS

Our cask ale is poured through traditional Aitken Tall Founts (pronounced 'font'). Tall Founts are the traditional method of dispense of Ale in Scotland dating back to the 1870's. Our set was custom designed and installed shortly after Aitkens were discontinued to the Abbotsford's own specifications in the late 90's. At the time it was thought best not to pressurise the system as this method had gone out of fashion, instead the taps were setup to extract ale just like Angram Beer Engines (The Modern-day Hand-pull) do using the compressor to run beverage pumps instead of the manual pump you see in most pubs. A truly unique design adding to The Abbotsford's rich History.

Our 7 guest cask lines (5 Aitkens, 2 Anagrams), and 2 guest craft keg lines are used to serve a continually changing range of beers. Each time a cask or keg finishes we clean the line and put a new beer on. Please study tap badges, ask staff for information/ recommendations, or check out our selection via the untappd app.

SCOTCH MALT WHISKY

The history of Whisky can be recorded back thousands of years to countries across the world. China has the oldest evidence of distillation in the world, but it was Scotland that gave the name and the fame to the 'Water of Life'.

The name is derived from the Gaelic phrase 'Uisge Beatha, or Usquebaugh' (Phonetically "oo, ska, bay" moving to "ish, ka, bay") meaning 'Water of Life'. The name has travelled far and wide, so much so that now you can find a Whisky distillery in almost every corner of the world.

In Scotland, we are so passionate about Whisky that we have created laws to hold up the integrity of our national drink and made the trademark name 'Scotch'. Many people think this is a slang name, but it has a very important meaning. To be called a Scotch, a Whisky must be aged in Oak Barrels for a minimum of Three Years and a Day (never forget the day!), be a Minimum of 40% Alcohol by Volume in the bottle and must be Mashed and Distilled in Scotland.

In Scotland, Whisky Distilleries are divided into five regions: Campbeltown, Highland, Islay, Lowland, and Speyside. Each Region has its own distinctive flavour due to the atmosphere and local resources. In The Abbotsford, we recognise Island Distilleries as another region in flavour and you will see it described as such in our menu.

Independently Bottled Whiskies

We love our Whisky in the Abbotsford and so do our friends. Here are some lovey Whiskies bottled by our friends that we have enjoyed. These are one off Whiskies, so once they're gone, they're gone. Ask the staff if we have anything special - we normally do, we just can't agree on which one is best!
